Sculptural Sunnies

Revé by René, a line of trend-conscious sunnies founded by René Chu, effortlessly turns eyewear into wearable sculptures. Got caught by the detachable cat ears or monster claws? It's cool, Beyonce did too. And the brand just got officially arty by collaborating with L.A.-based ceramicist Brian Rochefort, so time to cop a pair for yourself before they are everywhere.

Ni Hao, Si Mon!

Simon de Pury's memoir, The Auctioneer debuted last autumn, and now you can read the twisted tales of the world's most famous hammer man in Chinese as well. The perfect thing to read while jetting around for the new art season.

Artist Chen Ke has teamed up with Chronoswiss for a limited-edition timepiece with her dreamy painting on the dial. The idea was born through the connection with the uber-collector Uli Sigg, who owns one of the most significant collections of Chinese art.

Floor Couture

Husband and wife duo Janis Provisor and Brad Davis are the brains behind luxury carpet atelier Fort Street Studio. The energetic pair, both highly regarded artists, draw inspiration from 17th-century Persian courts to the emperor's private rooms in the Forbidden City. The results are fabric artworks with a watercolour-infused look. Apart from their showrooms in New York and L.A., make sure to pay their beautiful Hong Kong studio a visit, while next in town.
